A lack of proper focus on back-end infrastructure in many services results in operational failures that can become expensive for companies.